WILLKIE, McNARY ARE CHOSEN AS GOP CANDIDATES

Wilkie Takes Presidential Nomination from Taft and Dewey

Wendell L. Wilkie, the Indiana plowboy who became a utilities magnate, soared in his zenith this week following his nomination by the Republican party as their presidential candidate. With him on the ticket is Senator Charles McNary, of Oregon, who was nominated on the first ballot for vice-president.

It was not until the fifth ballot was cast that Wilkie's nomination was assured. On the first ballot he was third to Thomas Dewey, of New York who set the pace, and Senator Robert Taft, of Ohio, who was second. On the second ballot both Taft and Wilkie made gains on the Dewey lead, but it remained for the third ballot to send Wilkie into second place with only the fast-falling Dewey ahead of him.

In the fourth ballot, Dewey's victory following burst and anxious delegations went on both the Wilkie and Taft bandwagon. Significant on this ballot was the swing of Kansas, whose delegates were controlled by Alf Landon, to the Wilkie platform from Dewey. Wilkie continued to take a commanding lead but it remained for Michigan to really swing the tide, when it cast its entire support from Vandenberg to Wilkie. Shortly afterwards the James delegation of Pennsylvania jumped on the bandwagon. On the sixth ballot, the nomination was assured, but heavy approval of the convention. After both Taft and Dewey had scorned the vice-presidential nomination, Senator Charles McNary received top-heavy support and was nominated on the first ballot. The only real doubt in anyone's mind was whether McNary would accept, but from Washington, McNary gave his nod of approval and his nomination was made. Second in line for the vice-presidential nomination was Rept. Dewey Short, of Missouri.

Fiscal Year Opens State Coffers To Agencies to Spend

Hard-pressed state agencies were back in the money this week. It was the beginning of the fiscal year, and the $26,000,000 budget appropriation of the 1940 legislature went into effect.

Their heads above water once more, several departments were expected to re-hire some of the employees they dismissed in the late spring economy drive brought about in part by budget difficulties.

Numerous 1940-41 licenses, including those on beer and liquor production and sale, took effect July 1. Various occupational taxes expected to yield over $200,000 went into effect. Repairs were due to be started in the immediate future on the capitol dome at Frankfort, declared "unsafe" and blocked off for months.

N. O. Kimbrell, former Henderson County school superintendent, began work as executive secretary of the teachers' retirement system with the board of trustees scheduled for another meeting Saturday, to formulate rules and regulations for getting the retirement plan underway.

Some of the state employees, however, view the advent of July with trepidation. Reports of impending dismissals, backed by word from State Highway Commissioner J. Lyter Donaldson that there probably will be some personnel changes this month, aroused gossip in Frankfort.

In contrast, however, state employees will not be called upon to contribute to any campaign fund because the state administration is supporting no candidate for office.

Third-Term Favored by Kentucky Demos

Democrats of Kentucky assembled in Louisville Tuesday and unanimously endorsed the administration of Governor George Johnson, and President Roosevelt, and voted that if President Roosevelt should seek a third term, Kentucky's 22 electoral votes would be cast his way at the national convention in Chicago, July 15.

In case President Roosevelt does not accept a third term offer the Demos will surely make at the caucus, then Kentucky will lead a "Barkley for President" move. Recently Barkley had said in regard to his nomination, "They can go a lot further and do a lot worse and probably will."

The state caucus was a contrast with recent Kentucky Democratic meetings as harmony prevailed. J. Lyter Donaldson, Carrollton, was selected as national committeeman from Kentucky while Mrs. S. A. Conner, Bardonia, was chosen as national committeewoman.

Hall Hood, Murray, was named elector from the First Congressional district.

Positions on the ballot for the present race for Congressman in the First District have been determined and the incumbent, Noble J. Gregory, has top position.

ATTITUDE

sels. If the fleet were unhampered by the hundreds of small boats engaged in rescue work, it is possible that it could give an even better account of itself.

Despite many losses, the British are still maintaining a rather tight blockade around Germany which Italy's entrance into the war has made more stringent. If it were possible to keep the Germans from the resources of North Africa and from the Balkans, the British might have some hope of a letdown in the German offensive. However, this hope is offset by the pro-German actions of Rumania and will be lost almost entirely if the Germans get an important part of the French fleet.

The attack of Germany on France and the delays in reaching an armistice has given England a short-breathing spell in which to increase airplane production, although it is unlikely that increased production (estimated as high as 62% in three weeks) are sufficiently large to enable the British to equal the output of the Germans. The British will need to rely more on the hope that French resistance hurt Germany far more than is now apparent. It would appear, too, that there may be some ground for hope in the heading advance made by German troops into France. Quite recently the sort of advance made by the Nazis into France disorganizes the attacking army almost as much as it does the retreating one. It would seem likely that several months would be necessary for the reorganization of the German army in France to bring it to the same peak of efficiency as that shown in the Flanders campaign. However, the Germans may have extra reserves which will make it unnecessary to use these troops for the moment.

In the midst of these problems, England can turn only to Russia and the United States. Of the two, Russia is the more likely to help. However, it may be too much for Churchill who bitterly attacked the Bolsheviks after the last war, to expect the USSR to give much aid. As for the United States, there is still the view that our aid is largely vocal. In the face of this situation, it is possible that Britain might be willing to discuss a truce if Germany were sufficiently weak by her recent conquests to desire a breathing spell. Such a truce could not be lasting and it would likely prove ruinous to Hitler. It is one of those remote possibilities that the British are not likely to consider. However, considering the tenacity of Churchill, the fear which Hitler has of England's activities and the confidence which Germany has gained from her recent victories, it is likely that the attack on England will proceed in her favor. England has her position, her spirit, an effective air force and courage. The Germans have the superiority in the air and confidence. In such a fight, the edge would be with the Germans.

THE DEFEAT OF FRANCE

The defeat of the French by the German armies marks the capitulation of a nation already battered by internal difficulties which have been present since the time of Hitler's rise to power in 1933. It may be doubted, however, if France ever recovered fully from the last war. Despite outward financial recovery which France experienced after 1926, there were certain fields in which she never regained her former position. The drain on manpower brought about by her former war left a situation which was never remedied. Thousands of acres of land have gone without cultivators since 1918 because of the continuous decline in the birthrate since the war. The potential strength of the army was impaired by the constant drop in the number of young men subject to call for military duty each year.

The decrease in population and the drop in the number of young men led to an increase in the number of persons over fifty. France has led the countries of western Europe in the percentage of its population which is found in the age group over fifty. This condition led in part to the development of a certain spirit of defeatism which has been present among many Frenchmen since the last war. There was a tendency for them to say that France could not stand another war; a tendency since 1933 which led in some circles to a movement for appeasement of the dictators.

France's war preparations were hampered by two factors. When the Rightists were in power, the Socialists opposed military preparations because they feared that the army might be used against them or against Russia. On the other hand when the Popular Front was anxious for a larger army, there was some feeling by the Right that a powerful force in the hands of the Socialists and Communists would be used to aid Russia against her enemies. This situation led to confusion in military circles which apparently was never eliminated even after war started.

Airplane and munitions production was hampered in part by an antiquated factory system, in part by division among military leaders as to France's armament needs and in part by labor legislation passed after 1935. France after the war tended to ridicule the Germans for mass production and when the depression came in 1929 there was a tendency for the French to feel that they had been right in holding on to their older manufacturing methods. Recent rumors indicate that Deladier, Gamelin and others were never united in their views relative to the need of producing tanks and other mechanized units, since it was believed in many quarters that the Maginot Line was all sufficient to hold back

Bashful Ezra Stone is in a quandary because he must take beautiful Judith Barrett to a class dance, in the Paramount comedy based on the famous Sitash Stories by George Fitch, "Those Were the Days," which shows Tuesday and Wednesday at the Varsity Theatre. William Holden, Ronita Granville and Vaughan Glaser are also featured.

the Germans. The forty hour week was a third factor in slowing up armaments production. It is now admitted widely that France was in error in attempting to copy labor legislation of England and the United States. In both those countries there was considerable unemployment and any reduction in working hours merely spread work among more men instead of reducing production necessarily. In France, however, there was unemployment, but actually in many cases a shortage of laborers. Thus the reduction in hours of work actually cut down the rate of production. As an argument, however, against those persons who place all the blame of France's lack of preparation against the German attack on this factor, it must be pointed out that armaments production was raised by the Popular Front government and that the forty hour week was abolished a sufficiently long period before this war began for France to have produced more planes than she had for use against Germany.

Diplomatically the French went in several directions. From 1920-1933, the French tended to follow her own diplomatic leads, building up alliances against Germany and making it difficult for Germany to rebuild her economic forces. However, once Hitler came to power and the French past for appeasement, the French tended to follow the British lead and turned towards the appeasement.

Germany took time off to count her casualties and estimated that 27,074 German soldiers had been killed; 111,034 wounded, and 18,384 were missing since April 6. French losses have been reported at 1,500,000 dead, wounded, or missing in the last month of the war.

Allied air losses, the German high command said, amounted to 792 airplanes and 27 balloons since June 4. Since the middle of May, the report said, 400,000 tons of merchant shipping have been destroyed by subs, while the Allied shipping losses due to the German air force totalled over 299,000 tons.

In Washington, the Senate military affairs committee by a vote of 14-3 approved the appointment of Henry L. Stimson as Secretary of War, but withheld approval of Col. Frank Knox as Secretary of the Navy until it heard an anonymous writer testify. The writer claimed he had heard Knox say that he favored sending an army overseas.

Meanwhile President Roosevelt signed a bill forcing the commercial patents of patents to keep secret all patents related to national defense. The Navy announced the negotiations for contracts for Diesel engines, 22 submarines, totaling an expenditure of over seven million dollars.

NYA Project Grows at Murray State

The NYA Resident Project of Murray State College began the summer school term with a total enrollment of 145 student workers from 25 counties in Kentucky. This figure compares with a total of 180 that were enrolled on the project in 1939.

At the end of the spring semester 35 of the project workers resigned their post for various reasons while only six new ones enrolled for the summer term.

Those enrolling were: John L. Nall, Mayfield; Edward Oliver, Melber; Earl Bryant, Benton; Montgomery Givens, Browder; and Miss Mary Lloyd and Miss Margaret McGaw of Providence.

Supt. Emerson Crowley, head of the Murray Resident Project, stated recently, "The changes in the general function of the project will be minor for the summer. The project will still maintain each of its practical training divisions and school work will be carried on in the same manner as during the regular school term."

"There will be," he added, "an addition of auto mechanics to the project for a small number who are interested in this type of work."

Knox, Stimson Are Appointed To "War Cabinet" By Chief

Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of the Navy under President Coolidge and Hoover, and Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, were named to President Roosevelt's cabinet last week-end, by the president.

Stimson will become Secretary of War, succeeding Woodring, while Knox succeeds Edison, who resigned to run for governor of New Jersey, as Secretary of the Navy.

Congressional peace advocates interpreted the move as "one to form a 'war cabinet'," while administrative leaders proposed that it was a "move to sink partisanship in an hour of crisis."

Knox is a strong advocate for compulsory military training, while Stimson is a believer in a tremendous navy as the "first line of defense."

Both are Republicans, Knox being a candidate for vice-president on the London ticket last election.

The Wise and Foolish Virgins

The greatest men of the world are not always those whose names loom highest on the pages of world history. Indeed, they are sometimes never mentioned, if at all with equanimity, while the names of those whose contributions have been most disastrous stand in pillars of black and white.

It must be that throughout history, except through one short interim, valor must have been the redeeming trait of man. For a time, the Greeks found something better—wisdom—but beside it was the gaunt specter of Alexander.

The story of the Old Testament is the story of Hebrew imperialism. The world's literature has found a theme in war from Kaldasia and the Baghava Gita to the prose and poetry of America's laureates. War and conquest loom large through the works of Shakespeare. The great epics of the world are stories of heroes whose attributes were largely physical and destructive. Homer and Herodotus spoke of war—as far back as our records go.

General history devotes less than half a page, except in specialized versions, to Jesus Christ, whose influence has been felt most widely; yet there are pages of glittering prose outlining the conquests of the Caesars, Hannibal, Napoleon, Pericles, and Alexander. The redeeming feature is that Demosthenes, Aristotle, Socrates, Plato—and to a lesser degree Theocritus, Pindar, Bion, and Moschus—enjoy an equal place along with Alexander.

Take up your general history from the time of Christ until now. Turn the pages. Where are the names of the great scientists, the great discoverers, the great men whose trade was not war? Newton, Galileo, and Copernicus are dismissed with a few lines. Harvey is scarcely mentioned. Erasmus is but a word. Kepler is an annotation. Martin Luther, the reformer, and John Calvin are colorful enough to gain places, but they were not saints. What were the causes back of the burning of Huss? Who was Pico della Mirandola? What of the great painters and the musicians? Yes, there is space for Michaelangelo and Leonardo, but little. Where are the names of Pasteur, Lister, the names of the modern men of medicine.

Though Speke, Grant, Baker, Stanley, and Emin opened up the heart of Africa through their exploration of the Nile, how are they remembered? Stanley's reward was the most disappointing of all. His maps were accepted as frauds, and the famous he gave to landmarks no longer exist. The waterway he named the Livingstone River is now known as the Congo. The Mountains of the Moon no longer bear the name he gave them. Even Livingstone, who gave his life to teaching the natives of the Nile God without the encumbrance of redemption, has no place.

It is a sad thing to think that war is the world's god. Yet what can one believe? Take away the decorations, the acclaim, the plaudits for conquest, the false pride in race and of language, and wars will cease. Napoleon brooded over the conquests of Caesar and Hannibal, and Hitler over Napoleon. History made them heroes. Had history made heroes of Paul, Raphael, the chemists, Milton, Beethoven, there might be no wars now.

Imperialism is the name that describes conquest. It graced the shoulders of Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon—graced them because their names are made glorious by history—but it is the same imperialism that so disgraces the shoulders of Hitler—to us, not to Germans; to us, not to history. And yet, as powerful as imperialism vested in one man is, it is as nothing to imperialism vested in a people. Napoleon led France; Alexander led Greece; but Rome was great and lasting because she was a nation of imperialists. It is the same with England, whose history has been one of pressing imperialism. (The people of England have made Britain, not England the people.)

America is a nation young and growing. In its prime, much of its imperialism is behind it. It has what the world has gone down the long stretch of ages to achieve: Freedom. History's rarest gift is now in its hey-day—peace, prosperity, fraternity, liberty. The only enemy of freedom is war.

How ungrateful to the ages how unwise, how stubborn and unappreciative, how literally dumb we would be to enter war now or at any time because of the pride of language! What futility to sacrifice the freedom it took the world six thousand years or more to develop for a doubtful mess of pottage!

War was the first method of arbitration. If there are no better ways now, then there is no civilization and has been none; the world is still barbaric and has accomplished nothing, and progress is a dream of tomorrow that never comes.

Calloway County Farm Incomes Up

Larger incomes from tobacco made 1939 a better year than 1938, for farmers in Calloway county, Kentucky, it was found in a study made by the State College of Agriculture. Family farm incomes of farms studied averaged $686 in 1939 and $761 last year.

Tobacco was the largest single source of income in 1939, amounting to 34 per cent of the total income. Dairy cattle ranked next, furnishing 18 per cent of the income; hogs third, with 11 per cent, and poultry fourth, with 10 per cent.

Tobacco income per acre varied from $10 to $215. Heavy applications of manure and fertilizer, use of green manure crops and careful attention to crops, produced better profits.

Ernest J. Nesius, who made the study, found that farmers who did well growing tobacco also made money from livestock, which he says points to the value of a well-rounded farm program. Such farmers had good livestock and gave it proper attention. Good milk cows were especially helpful.

Strawberries also helped out in Calloway county, where handled by family labor. Mr. Nesius questions their value where much labor must be hired.

Since tobacco accounts for such a large portion of the farm income in Calloway county, Mr. Nesius recommends that more attention be given to producing high-quality tobacco. He would use more fertilizer and manure, and sow all land to cover and green manure crops. He also would increase livestock attention, where enough feed can be produced on the farm.

SHRUB PRUNING TIME HERE

Wood-growth of shrubs must be renewed to make the plants look attractive, reminds N. R. Elliott, Kentucky College of Agriculture, landscape specialist—and the time to prune is now. The best method is to remove a fourth to a third of the old growth, taking it clear to the ground. When this is done regularly over a period of years, the top of the plant is renewed every three to four years.

It also reduces the size of the plants. A good rule to remember is always to prune as soon after blooming as possible, says Prof. Elliott.

WHO WILL TAKE A BRITISH CHILD REFUGEE

Many Americans listen over the radio about bombings of towns and about women and children killed or fleeing hungry and terrified before the ruthless invaders, until they grow sick at heart. Some cry out despairingly: "Oh, that I could do something!" Dorothy Thompson says: "It is very dangerous for the human race to have a sympathy that does not express itself in action. To observe human suffering and do nothing about it results eventually in becoming callous."

Since the advent of Hitler, the British people have given homes to thousands of refugee children. Here is an opportunity for Americans to do so much as the British people did when they were better off.

The British Federation of University Women has cabled the American Association to ask whether any of its members or friends are willing to offer homes "for the duration" to children of members of the British Federation of University Women. The person signifying his willingness to take a child must furnish an affidavit showing he is able to support the child and will until the war and the worst results are over. It is assumed that the transportation will be furnished by the British government or by the parents of the children.

There may be some who are interested and can furnish an affidavit of support but cannot offer a home, or there may be others who can provide a home but cannot take on the financial burden. The American Association can certainly utilize the resources of both groups. Any one interested in having a part in this great humanitarian effort, please see or call Mrs. Franklin P. Inglis, president of the Murray Branch of the American Association of University Women.

THIS DAY OF FREEDOM

Today the thoughts of millions have turned from business and its pressures to the liberal pleasures of holiday relief. It is as it should be.

The Declaration of Independence was a statement declaring the freedom of the United States to carry on its government in its own way without the supervision of any other nation. The very form of that government superimposed that governmental freedom upon the people. Because this is a Democracy, Americans have their liberties.

Yet with all our political liberty, we have no freedom from business except on holidays and Sundays. We have become used to Sundays on which our Christian ideals have more or less limited our activities, but on the Fourth, as today, we can celebrate in spirit and in truth the full degree of our freedom.

We can celebrate this Fourth of July with the added thankfulness that on this world today, where un-Democratic principles are flourishing, we still have the privilege of being free. In so doing, we are not being smug nor complacent; we certainly are not thankful that other nations whose politics were like our own are now overrun. But we are glad that we can forget the world, business, politics, and bill collectors on the Fourth!

State Employment Service Establishes Teachers Agency

Frankfort, Ky., June 8.—The Teacher Placement Service, newly established unit of the Kentucky State Employment Service system, is receiving numerous orders for qualified teachers to fill openings in educational systems throughout the State, according to L. P. Jones, supervisor.

"Objectives of the service are twofold," Mr. Jones said, "to assist teachers of the state to secure desirable positions and to help school boards and employing officials to obtain the exact type teacher, supervisor, principal or superintendent desired." The service functions for all teachers whether employed and seeking a better position or unemployed and seeking a teaching position. Mr. Jones pointed out. No fees of any kind are charged either teachers or employers.

The unit, while in existence only six weeks, has on file nearly one thousand applications of teachers and has made one hundred referrals to teaching positions. Three orders have been filled by the service. These were a principal, a mathematics professor and coach, and a high school librarian.

The Teacher Placement Service operates from the Frankfort administrative office of the Unemployment Compensation and State Employment Service, 122 Logan Street, Box 359.

All teachers and school boards throughout the state are invited to the service. By this means every teacher applicant has coverage of the entire state; also all employers, school boards, etc., may draw from every section of Kentucky, for the exact teacher needed. Search may be made in all other states if necessary to find the kind of teacher needed.

A complete written application is required, giving a complete record of training, experience and ability. Photographs are used with all registrations. All training and experience records are verified by letter before any referral is made. High-grade character references are checked in writing before an effort is made to place the teacher. Credentials of only the best three current applicants are sent to any employing office.

All applications are taken by mail; they are application blanks to be sent to the applicants from the administrative office, 122 Logan Street, Frankfort, Kentucky. The applicant is requested to fill out the application and mail it to the Frankfort office. No Teacher Placement applications are taken in the central office, local office or itinerant points. ### Dempsey Knocks Out Luttrell in Second Round Monday

The old Manassa Mauler stepped back in the ring Monday night, and showed all his killer instinct to knock Cowboy Luttrell clear out of the ring to win in a two-round fight that saw Dempsey make hamburger meat out of Luttrell's face.

Fought before over 12,000 people in Atlanta, Ga., the match showed that Dempsey was much slower and had lost the zip in his punches, but he had an easy time with the Cowboy.

The fight was precipitated in the spring when Dempsey was refereeing a wrestling match between the Cowboy and an opponent. The Cowboy got an illegal hold on his opponent and held on despite Dempsey's threats. Jack finally got tired and knocked the Cowboy out. Then Luttrell challenged the 45-year old former heavyweight, title-holder to a 10-round fight or less with fistic gloves. Dempsey took the challenge and the Cowboy is now wishing he had forgotten all about the incident.

Stella Gossip

The large concourse of people that assembled in the beautiful city of Murray Saturday, June 29, 1940, was very much enjoyable—even the couple that engaged in a "fuss" near Corner Drugstore. The court house, where the Democrat convention was held, was full up. Grand and eloquent.

Jim Thompson out of Hazel way, Ed Adams on the river north of Coldwater, and "Ole Eagle" Stella way, compared rain, fall of June 28. Jim reported "terrible." Ole Eagle "a-plenty and too much." However, we are more satisfied. They seem to think that "what is to be, will be" and "me" has been, has been.

Roy Hurt carried our mail on Route 1 last week in place of Bill Higgins Whitnell, while Bill vacationed away down South in Florida. I hope Mrs. Whitnell went along with him, too—you know what! When Roy was a kid I gave him a young rabbit for a pet. But alas! it made its getaway.

A farmer can cultivate 20 acres of corn with less labor with a modern corn cultivator than 10 acres with double shovel and bull tongue plows. Besides he is sitting on spring seat behind his fine team of mules. The man (might have been a woman) who invented the cultivator deserves a lot of "Kentucky's Best" bottled in bond as a gracious gift. Hold the phone!

A brand new 2-cent stamp with picture of General (7) in uniform. It was sent to me by mail, by whom I know not. An old style, long tail paper money bills is now ancient history. And I have sailed high as a kite in an air plane.

Early last Saturday morning I was pondering how to get to Murray. By and by Roy Bean and Miss Robbie Bean who live below the Coldwater bridge, by the river-side, came by my mail box in their car and in 30 minutes the three of us landed on Court Square. It is good to live in this modern age, in a Christian nation.

Thompson left ice at our house that day. They asked me about the war in Europe. I said, "I've not lost a wink of sleep, cause Britain will win!"

Who wept with delight when you gave her a smile and trembled with fear at your frown? Now who was she?

I got my weight and fortune told on the 1-cent scales at the front store, which said "Your sunny attitude toward life, is a constant inspiration to your friends."

Yes indeed, laugh and the world laughs with you, but weep and you weep alone! I know you know it.—"Eagle"

Cedar Knob News

A. W. and Johnnie Simmons, Hardy Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Jess Dick and son Hubert, Aylon McClure, "Uncle Jeff" Stubblefield and Hatten Lewis were in Murray Monday.

First in your mind, perhaps, the telephone industry's principal contribution to the South is quick, dependable communication.

But Southern Bell is also important as a citizen, as an employer of people, as a payer of taxes, as a purchaser of materials. In 1939 alone, operating expenses amounted to approximately fifty-five million dollars, not including additional millions used for new construction.

To build, operate and maintain this system requires more than twenty-one thousand skilled workers whose annual payroll is approximately thirty million dollars.

These telephone men and women contribute to the business and social welfare of their communities, and of the South. They and their families compose a group of perhaps eighty thousand people who are dependent on this business for their livelihood.

As a tax-payer, the Southern Bell does much toward the support of the local, state and national governments. Total taxes last year exceeded nine and three-quarters million dollars, nearly twenty-seven thousand dollars a day.

The Southern Bell company is a Southern industry in the fullest sense and its activities form a substantial contribution to the growth and prosperity of the South.

In Memory

The sudden death of Mrs. Lula Wilderson was a great shock to each of us. Just one short month ago our Society met at her home.

We had a good time and I very well remember the beautiful bouquets of flowers she had placed for our enjoyment. We were all happy together, but how sad we would have been had we known the circle of our Society would have been broken so soon. So let us thank God that on this Road of Life the future is hidden from our view and that the sorrows of life are obscure until reached.

Miss Lula had only lived in our midst 10 or 12 years but we all learned to love her. She was a sweet Christian character, one who loved the Sunday School, the Missionary Society, the Church, the Bible and her Savior. We will miss her but we know the grief is all on this side because there is no grief over yonder where the redeemed are in the presence of their Lord. We feel that she is now at rest in that City.

made with hands eternal in Heaven.

The Departed

There is a new mound upon the field,

Where lies white floral wreaths, unwilted still.

The last farewell is said, the night falls chill,

And now you understand.

Can home be home without your presence there?

Can roses smell as sweet or be as fair?

Can good of joy be mine unless you share?

But now you understand.

Life's riddle has been solved, the dreams made plain,

Forgotten now earth's discord, and its pain,

Because now you understand.

I would not call you back to tread with me

The world's rough road for love must unselfish be

The veil for you is lifted; you are free,

For now you understand.

For you the great illusion now is o'er

The grave you feared is but an open door

That leads to life in God for evermore.

All this you now understand.
